

Biogenesis

That day, I recall,
It rained for hours.
The night air was balmy,
Infused with the dank smell
of moss and damp bark.
Restless, I rose, but didn't wake.

A full moon lit my path.
A fairy ring of mushrooms
Encircled a spring,
Teaming with life
A clay cup, hung from my waist.

[chorus]
I found you, or you found me,
I drank with abandon,
Filling your veins
With my blood.

At dawn's mist, the dream
Did not steal away,
I feel you. Inside me,
Familiar. Conceived
Together now
And forever.

As I sleep or make love
The helix unravels
Your bones lengthen, strengthen
Striving for independence.

Before we met, I knew you.
We shared one heart,
Now, you lay: warm,
Naked, against my breasts.
Your lips,
Rooting for sustenance.

[chorus]
I found you, or you found me,
You drink with abandon,
Filling your veins
With my blood.
